*There is an ongoing reconciliation with NISO due to energy loss of 18,704.33 MWh across August and September which was not captured by Nbet. This will be recognised in due course

The sharp decline in revenue was primarily due to the breakdown of three critical transformers immediately after the company's handover which resulted from low voltage windings failure and HV bushings failure and failure to comply with protection procedures among others. These transformers were essential for operations and were promptly taken to Lagos for repairs.

•One transformer was successfully repaired, restored, and reconnected to the national grid in August, which has resumed fully operations.

•Two transformers remain under repair and are expected to be returned to the plant in November and December, which will enable full restoration of capacity.

This temporary reduction in operational capacity directly impacted production output and, consequently, revenue. The decline is therefore attributable to unforeseen equipment breakdowns rather than underlying business performance issues, with recovery anticipated once all transformers are fully restored.

The Board of Directors has now taken the bold step of ordering brand new transformers from Siemens to guarantee uninterrupted power generation.

| 24.1 | In July 2022, the company issued N40.085billion unsecured corporate bond for a 7-period tenor and at a coupon and effective interest rate of 14.5% and 14.70% respectively. Borrowings are initially measured at fair value, net of transaction costs incurred. Borrowings are subsequently measured at amortise cost.
